down what they remembered of Billiot's alleged statements immediately after the trip.

Upon his arrival here Tuesday at 1:30 p.m., Billiot was brought into the investigator's office at the Sheriff's Department where he was fingerprinted and photographed. Samples of his hair were also taken for evidence.

Peterson stated he told Billiot to save "He relates any question of possible insanity to Billiot's past history of erratic behavior."

"Self-induced insanity by drugs can't be used as defense for insanity," he said, and noted he feels Billiot should face trial.

In reference to his trip with Billiot from New Orleans to Hancock, Peterson said, "I think he seemed very rational, I definitely think he knows right from wrong from my experiences with him on the ride back."

The sheriff said Billiot pointed out a local hamburger business when other officers in the car suggested they stop and have something to eat during the trip.

"We ordered five hamburgers with cokes to make things as simple as possible and he asked if we would change the order so he could have a chocolate milk shake instead," Peterson said.

Peterson said the extradition hearing Tuesday in New Orleans lasted some 15 minutes and was routine.

Both Peterson and Donald Croll, co-counsel for Billiot, testified before Louisiana Criminal District Court Judge Rudolph Becker III that the 20-year-old was in fact Billiot.

Peterson stated he also testified that Billiot would be given food and his constitutional rights respected.

He said he also testified that Billiot would be given food and his constitutional rights respected.

He noted that meant Billiot would not be allowed to speak with department officials unless his attorney were present.

The trip back to Hancock County ended a two day ordeal involving a dozen Mississippi officials and two trips to New Orleans.

Public defenders Monday in New Orleans successfully blocked an extradition hearing for a 20-year-old Hancock County man accused of the Thanksgiving Day slay-~~hammer~~ slaying of three relatives in Leesburg.

Attorney James Bertel Jr. secured a delay of the extradition hearing through the unusual tactic of asking the Louisiana Supreme Court to schedule a hearing for his client before extradition could be considered in Criminal District Court.

Louisiana Supreme Court Justice James Dennis honored Bertel's request Dec. 23 with a temporary stay of the extradition hearing previously scheduled for Monday.

However, four other Supreme Court judges overruled Dennis' action Tuesday night and the extradition hearing was scheduled Tuesday.

Mississippi officials waited another day Monday for the extradition hearing to begin so that Billiot could return with them to Hancock County.

They knew nothing of a writ of certiorari and a stay order filed by Bertel and Christofferson on Dec. 22 requesting a hearing hearing until they arrived at the courthouse in New Orleans Monday morning.

The fact that Louisiana Criminal Court Judge Rudolph F. Becker III who handled the extradition proceeding had been contacted Christmas Eve about the writ being issued was not reported to Mississippi officials until they arrived at the New Orleans courtroom.

Nobody explained why the officials had not been contacted before traveling to New Orleans.

But since they were there, Mississippi District Attorney Albert Neculce informed the judge they would wait to see if any other Louisiana Supreme Court justices would react to Dennis' actions.

While they waited, Judge Becker attempted to contact some of the seven other Supreme Court justices to find a majority who would overturn or sustain Dennis' action.

At noon, the judge notified the Mississippi officials and members of the press from two states that two justices had been located and would contact the court with their decision by 2 p.m.

The other justices apparently could not be reached.

Bertel, while waiting for an elevator at the courthouse at noon, explained the writ filed on behalf of his client was unusual and was taken from the case of Ex parte Louisiana.

"Our research has revealed only one other case similar and we used it as the basis of our filing," he said.

Although that ruling went contrary to our opinion, the language at the end of the ruling left a crack in the door, so to speak."

That crack, Bertel explained, enabled him and his associate to file the writ which caused Monday's delay.

Bertel believed his client was incapable of participating in his own defense at a Louisiana extradition hearing or a Mississippi trial.

"He tells me he is Jesus Christ, and if you talk with him long enough he begins to look like him," Bertel said.

"If he is so mentally incompetent that he can't communicate with him, how can we advise him of his rights to protect himself in Mississippi?"

"Wouldn't justice be better served if he could be saved by examination by officers in Mississippi? There is a chance they could take a written confession from him," he said.

"I don't think they would but we have to anticipate all the possibilities."

MISSISSIPPI CONSUMER REPORT

FREE VACATION

Attorney General Bill Allain is warning consumers to be careful when signing up for "free vacation" offers being solicited throughout the state. According to Allain, these "free vacations" are promotional schemes to sell real estate or schemes to defraud the consumer from his money.

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office has received numerous complaints during the past few weeks from consumers that have received the "free vacation" offers. Usually you are contacted through the mail or by telephone solicitation stating that you have won an exciting fun filled holiday with deluxe room accommodations for several days and nights in such resort locations as Las Vegas, Reno or Florida. However, the files of the Consumer Protection Division contain complaints from unhappy people who took the promoter up on the "free vacation" offer only to find after arriving that they have no reservations and the hotel staff had never heard of them or the promoter.

"Free vacation" offers continue to surface throughout Mississippi and consumers should execute extreme caution before investing their money. Here are some problems that may arise if you become involved:

• You may be asked for as much as a $100 deposit to "hold" the room.

• You may be asked to provide your own transportation to and from destination.

• For additional information, contact the Consumer Protection Division, Consumer Protection Division, P.O. Box 220, Jackson, Mississippi 39205.

By Ellis Cuevas

In just a few hours the year of 1981 will be history. The second year of this decade has just passed by in a big hurry.

Recent conversations with others indicate that we are not the only ones who are saying 1981 passed in a rush.

We hope 1982 (it will be hard to write and type that 1982), will be a great year for everyone. We know many feel our area will not be hit as bad as other areas of the country because of the economic conditions forecast.

School students are beginning to get edgy, or should we say parents, because of the Christmas and New Year's Holidays.

It will be back to the old grind next week for most students, and some are happy while others are unhappy.

We know how many of them feel, as we remember when we were in school. If students only knew how good they have it.

Students do have the teachers' convention to look forward to for more holidays.

Please, we urge everyone who drinks a little too much not to drive. Too many persons have their holidays marred by traffic accidents, and usually it is the sober ones who suffer the most.

Leave your car, have someone sober drive you home. We want you to enjoy the holidays next year, not with a sour memory of the previous year. Once a life is taken, it cannot be replaced.

Enjoy yourself, have fun, celebrate, welcome the New Year, let someone else do the driving.

Happy New Year to everyone!

VANDALS AT WORK—It is hard to figure what benefits accrue to a person or persons involved in the destruction of public property, top photo, such as complete removal of the guard rails at the end of the fishing pier at Ulman Avenue and Beach Boulevard, Bay St. Louis. A portion of the railing is also missing near the pier's end. We hope no one will fall into the Bay because of the vandalism on the pier. So many people use the public facility throughout the year, for what it is really intended to be used for, with just a few 'idiots' causing damages.

MISSISSIPPI ECONOMIC COUNCIL

A BRIGHTER 1982

1981 will go into the history books as a year in which an American president reversed a half century of public policy.

President Reagan, with a Republican Senate and considerable influence in the House, enacted measures which curtailed federal spending, decreased taxation, and reined in the federal regulatory establishment.

Results of this reversal, which began Oct. 1, have been a lowering of interest rates and inflation. Unemployment is up, but should go back down in coming months as supply-side policies take effect.

Critics of the President's economic recovery plan argue that it is not working. Some congressional critics have advocated recinding the promised tax relief — a move which would be counter to the supply-side economic cure prescribed by lawmakers last summer.

The Mississippi Economic Council believes that the critics are crying too soon. It took fifty years to produce the economic miseries the country is now afflicted with, and it will take more than three months of a new economic course to provide real change.

Unemployment cannot be permanently cured with government jobs;

the source of this country's wealth is not the government printing press, but, rather, its productivity.

The administration and Congress should pursue the economic recovery program so that this nation can enjoy an economically healthy third century of existence. But, the course will not be easy and sacrifices will have to be made.

Toddlers anxious to expand independence

To a child who has just learned to walk, each new day brings fresh opportunities for discovery. And now that the feet are walking, the child shows a growing desire for independence.

One of the ways a child learns independence is by imitating her parents and siblings, according to Growing Child, monthly child development newsletter.

The child toddles around the house, "helping." And she begins to explore her clothing—imitating others by pulling off her cap, tugging on shoe laces, pulling off shoes.

Every mother who has tied a toddler's shoe in a double knot knows that even this scant protection from the pinches, pulling and poking fingers of a persistent child.

Don't let your youngster's apparent determination to join the nearest nudist colony worry you. She is just as interested in exploring her clothes and herself as she is in exploring the rest of her world. So take advantage of her interest to start her on the road to independence.

As you get her ready for the day, encourage her to help. Untie her shoe laces and loosen them as you say, "Now we'll take off Erin's shoe! We untie them, we pull the laces and off it comes!" Let the child pull the laces apart. Pulling these strings through the little holes is great fun—and good hand-eye training, too.

Soon she can unlace the shoe all by herself. What an accomplishment! Look out, though—as she kicks her feet in excitement that she might really fly! Before that happens, show her how to pull it off, and then say, "Now give the shoe to Mommy, please."

As you and your toddler go about getting the rest of her clothes off, follow the same procedure. Get the garment part-way off and let her finish pulling it off. And talk about what you and she are doing together.

Does all this sound like just play and pretty time-consuming for a busy mother? It is, play, granted, but your child is learning important lessons about her clothes and herself: about an "off," about how to balance herself while she pulls off a shoe or socks.

She also learns about the characteristics and textures of shoes, shoe laces, socks, shirts, etc. And how about the lesson on neatness? "Give the shoe to Mommy," and the lesson on politeness ("please and thank-you")! All this, plus taking some early steps toward independence.

P.S.: A word to the wise: When you buy your toddler a pair of shoes, always buy at least one extra pair of shoes, and keep some white tape on hand. Eager little hands are hard on shoe lace tips, and there's nothing more frustrating than trying to push a bushy-tailed shoe lace through a small eyelet when the shoe is on a wriggling foot.

MISSISSIPPI MARKET NEWS

It all goes well during a year also agreed to take meeting this week in Moscow 600,000 metric tons from Brazil between a group of National

Soybean Processors Association (NSPA) members and the USSR has not purchased any U.S. soybean meal since a 27,000-metric-ton purchase of U.S. soybean meal in 1979, but USDA's Soviet analyst, Keith Seaver, says, Although NSPA President Sheldon Hauck stressed that the trip to Moscow "is not a trading mission, but a market in Moscow, including Gaylord development mission," Soviet Com. vice president of Gold

Kist, Inc., Don Leavenworth, director of the group vice president of Cargill, Inc.; Richard Bell, potentially the largest new president of Riceland Foods, market for U.S. soybean meal and Sheldon Hauck.

Looking at the domestic soybean picture, U.S. soybean latest official USDA estimates put 1981-82 USSR soybean production at 1.2 crop soybeans, and analysts million metric tons, but agree say the recent heavy entries cultural attaché reports coming out of the Soviet Union have been partly spurred by this have projected USSR meal imports to be as high as 1.5

The feeling is that producers are putting their corn into the market for up to 3 years, vestige sector is estimated to getting loans on this corn and increase meal consumption taking advantage of the CCC from 2.2 to 2.8 million metric tons to help pay storage costs on reserve corn.

The USSR traditionally takes the bulk of its meal from farmer-owned reserve have been increasing by more than 40 million bushels per week since mid-November. As of Nov. 25, 1981, corn in the reserve totaled 134.1 million bushels, up dramatically from only 28 million on Nov. 4.

Tight soybean meal supplies coupled with an increase in demand from poultry and hog producers has created a pretty hot soybean meal market in the country, meal traders report.

An increase in soybean meal exports, lower processor crushing rates and tight farmer holding have tightened up domestic meal supplies, while at the same time, more favorable profit margins due to lower feed costs have stimulated demand.

Domestic demand for soybean meal seasonally picks up at this time of year, but a 25 to 30 percent drop in soybean meal price from a year ago has ignited demand even more.

Lott among early favorites for reelection, survey finds

Nearly a year before the Mississippi congressional elections local factors continue to dominate people's preference for Congress and continue to favor early leads by four well-established Congressmen.

According to a public opinion survey by the Department of Political Science at Mississippi State University, likely voters across the state would divide 58 percent for the Democratic nominees and 43 percent for the Republicans in a manner similar to the 1980 election.

Congressmen Jamie Whitten, David Bowen, G.V. Montgomery, and Trent Lott of whom won easy re-election bids in 1980—are early favorites for reelection.

However, Fourth District Cong. Wayne Dowdy, who narrowly won a special election after the resignation of John Wilson, faces the prospect of another tough election.

"Efforts by some Republicans to make the upcoming House elections a referendum on the performance of a popular president have been thwarted by local concerns that normally nominate House elections," said Dr. Stephen Shaffer, survey director.

The most important factor influencing people's preference for the House is their party ties, with more than 80 percent of Republicans and Democrats indicating an intention to vote for their party's nominee in 1982.

Shaffer said the "Democratic nature of the First, Second, and Third Congressional districts largely accounts for the advantages that Whitten, Bowen, and Montgomery, respectively, have. The more Republican orientation of the Fifth District" aids Lott, he added.

Though the Democrats also have a partisan advantage in the Fourth District, Republicans are much more united in support of their party's candidates, leading to a House contest too close to call, Shaffer said.

Compared to the importance of party ties, the assistant professor said President Reagan's popularity has little impact on voter intentions for the House.

Those who rate his performance "approximately as excellent or good" are only slightly more likely to prefer the Republican Party than are those rating him as only fair or poor, Shaffer said.

Shaffer explained that another reason Reagan is not more helpful to his party's chances in the House is that many people react negatively to him.

Reagan's performance, therefore, is unlikely to affect any of the contests except perhaps the close Fourth District race, Shaffer said.

He said the conservative nature of most Mississippians makes the Republicans "some cause for hope, though at present few national issues are affecting preferences for the House."

The MSU survey found that among Mississippians having opinions on various issues, 96 percent oppose affirmative action, 90 percent support letting local school boards require the saying of a non-denominational prayer in class, 89 percent oppose abortion, 86 percent oppose busing, and 83 percent support all forms of capital punishment.

Ole Miss scientists perfecting cure for world's leading killer disease

Scientists at The University of Mississippi may be able to prevent dangerous side effects of the anti-malarial drug primaquine by altering its chemical composition.

Insecticides and anti-malarial drugs have lessened the occurrence of malaria since World War II, said Dr. James D. McChesney, chairman of the Ole Miss School of Pharmacy's Department of Pharmacognosy. Dr. McChesney is studying ways to improve primaquine, a quinoline derivative, in research sponsored by the United Nations' World Health Organization.

Although the occurrence of malaria has been curtailed in the United States, an international epidemic has been caused by insecticide bans and a lack of effective control programs by a majority percent of the world's population. Malaria kills more people every year than either cancer or heart disease, he added.

The toxic reaction produced by primaquine is an anemia associated with an enzyme deficiency that is most widespread in dark-skinned people living in tropical regions where malaria is most prevalent, Dr. McChesney said.

For the past two years he and his team of researchers have studied microorganisms unique qualities still make it the best drug to use."

He said primaquine's most important characteristics include the ability to cure malarial relapses, to stop biting mosquitoes from acquiring the disease from an infected individual, thereby stopping the spread of the disease, and to prevent the disease from occurring if an individual has taken the drug just before it immediately after a mosquito bite.

Positive effects of primaquine outweigh the negative ones, Dr. McChesney said. The work he and a team of researchers have conducted for the World Health Organization has involved trying to isolate chemical components of primaquine which cause side effects, and to research those effects to understand better how primaquine works and to modify the drug in order to eliminate the toxic products.

If the metabolite that is active against malaria-producing parasites isn't the one that produces the toxic side effect, the effective one can be used to treat malaria rather than primaquine, Dr. McChesney said.

For the past two years he and his team of researchers have studied microorganisms to discover the changes primaquine undergoes when it is introduced into a biological system. Initial studies, he said, indicate that major primaquine metabolites produced by some microorganisms are the same as ones produced in mammals. Now research is aimed at looking at metabolites in a biological hierarchy beginning with rats and eventually leading to man.

Dr. McChesney said that it may be 5-10 years before the new drug is ready for use. Americans traveling in tropical regions and those living there will no longer fear malaria.

Instead, the United States needs to approach other countries and encourage a consolidated policy pertaining to Libya, he said.

"There's not a whole lot we can do alone," Dr. Cooke said. "We're not the only ones who have had trouble with Libya. They have been causing problems for a long time in areas like Chad and the Sudan, so a coherent policy toward Libya is definitely called for."

Although there is every reason to believe Khadafy did order the assassinations of President Reagan and other top officials, the threat is probably a show of strength for the benefit of other Arab governments, Dr. Cooke com-

Premiums offered with State Historical Society membership

The Mississippi Historical Society has announced a membership bonus to new members who join before March 5, according to Elbert R. Mullins, secretary-treasurer of the society.

New members may choose either a set of historical maps of Mississippi or a copy of the facsimile printing of Irwin

Russell's famous folk poem, "Christmas Night in the Quarters."

New members who join during this period may also attend the annual meeting of the Society in Natchez, March 5 and 6, timed to coincide with the La Salle Tricentennial and the 50th anniversary of the Natchez Pilgrimage, which begins that weekend.

The theme of the meeting will be "French Exploration and Settlement in the Lower Mississippi Valley," in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the explorations of Robert Cavalier de La Salle in the Mississippi Valley.

La Salle visited the Natchez Indians in 1682 near the site of the present city of Natchez.

Persons interested in joining or learning more about the activities of the Mississippi Historical Society should write the organization at P. O. Box 671, Jackson, MS, 39205, or call 354-6218.

Business students aiding small firms

When Alice Lute opened an educational supply store in Oxford last year, she admitted that she knew very little about business. With a new and still growing company, however, she could not afford the services of a business consultant to help with her problems.

Now, she and her partner, Jean Pisars, have a better understanding of business operations, can conduct inventories of their supplies, and are able to spot strengths and weaknesses in their store. The help they needed was free, and it came from students in the University of Mississippi's School of Business Administration.

Each semester at Ole Miss students in a marketing class get academic credit by serving as consultants for small firms in the state that cannot afford professional consultants.

This fall The Nest, the store owned by Ms. Lute and Ms. Pisars, was among the client companies for which business students conducted projects. A team of students, one of ten teams, in the class met with the two owners and began solving some of the company's business problems.

"When we started the company, we were naive about certain business operations," Ms. Lute said. "The team from Ole Miss was extremely helpful in preparing a profit-loss statement for us. Without the profit-loss statement, we really didn't know from month to month where we stood with our business," said Ms. Lute.

The students prepared a statement for us that added all of our expenses, and then subtracted what we had sold to give us our profit.

"It will be extremely helpful to us because we will have a picture of our business from month to month. We will know that costs we need to cut to break even or make a greater profit. Working with the students was helpful because it made us ask ourselves questions about our company that we really had not thought about before."

Business students have been instrumental in both the co-operation and guidance of students according to Dr. Gerald U.

Understanding Islamic mind essential to East-West relations, professor feels

An American embargo against Libya won't do much to combat the hit squad allegedly assigned by Moammar Khadafy to stalk top U.S. government officials, says a University of Mississippi expert on Northern Africa.

With the large amount of Libyan oil being exported to Europe and the Soviet Union, Khadafy can't be fought on an economic battleground, said Dr. James Cooke, an Ole Miss history professor who has done extensive study in North Africa.

"Libya does business with a lot of people," Dr. Cooke said. "Europeans really need Libya oil and I just don't see that a boycott or other economic sanctions will make much difference in the situation."

Instead, the United States needs to approach other countries and encourage a consolidated policy pertaining to Libya, he said.

"There's not a whole lot we can do alone," Dr. Cooke said. "We're not the only ones who have had trouble with Libya. They have been causing problems for a long time in areas like Chad and the Sudan, so a coherent policy toward Libya is definitely called for."

Although there is every reason to believe Khadafy did order the assassinations of President Reagan and other top officials, the threat is probably a show of strength for the benefit of other Arab governments, Dr. Cooke com-

"I think Khadafy's goal is primarily one of leadership within certain segments of the Arab world," he said. "The hit squad threat is aimed at showing people that the long arm of Libya can reach out."

Recent troubles between the United States and Libya are not surprising, he said.

"Something like this has been coming for a while. Very early on in his administration, Khadafy wanted us to get our air base out of Libya, and on many occasions has shown vehement support of Palestinian actions."

Dr. Cooke recommended that Americans stop looking at Arab people as "Islamic fanatics" and see them as a people with a past from which they are reacting. He noted that North Africans resent outside influence because they were colonized for many years. For that reason, he said, U.S. officials need to study the region carefully before any action is taken against Libya.

Khadafy is a young dynamic man who is being the strong kind of leader Islamic people like," Dr. Cooke explained. "Those demonstrations you see for him are honest demonstrations."

Although Islam is no great threat to world security, he said, the Libyan crisis may be yet another cue that Westerners need to try to understand the Islamic mind, especially since oil has brought the East and West together.

Girl Scouts certified in first aid

Girl Scout Troup 27, in cooperation with the Red Cross, recently sponsored a multimedia first aid course. Instructors were Ethel Schott of Waveland and Elizabeth Holmes of Bay St. Louis.

Girl Scout leaders and other Girl Scout troops were invited to attend. Eight adults and eleven girls received Red Cross certification.

Troup 27 will use this knowledge in its spring camping trips which include winter camping at Camp Ida Kana in Wiggins, a river cleanup weekend, a canoe event on Black Creek, primitive camping at Flint Creek, and when the girls serve as aides at a sister troop campout for sixth graders in May.

Hancock North Central Elementary students raise

St. Jude funds

Hancock North Central Elementary students have raised some $1,000 for the St.

Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis.

The contribution was realized through student participation in a community service project from individual sponsors and the community.

Ms. Lute agreed to comment. "The professionalism exhibited by our student team was highly commendable. They were genuinely concerned for our business and jumped right in and helped us."

Client companies for the class projects are obtained through recommendations from the Small Business Development Center at Ole Miss and from the Small Business Administration. Also, companies which contact the School of Business Administration are sometimes included in the student projects.

Business students have been instrumental in both the co-operation and guidance of students according to Dr. Gerald U.

Laboratory animals help human behavior studies

A newly born rhesus monkey attaches itself to life in the first moving object it sees. Usually its mother is the object of its affection, but rhesus have been known to attach themselves to dogs and even moving toys.

The phenomenon, called imprinting, occurs in most mammals, said scientists at The University of Mississippi Primate Center, where research is conducted with animals to help make important discoveries affecting humans.

Applying a behavior that occurs in animals to people is one technique researchers use in order to make discoveries that are aimed at making life better for mankind, said Dr. John Bedford, manager of the Primate Center and research assistant professor in the Research Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences at Ole Miss. For example, scientists have extended the imprinting concept to humans to learn how critical touch may be in the relationship that develops between an infant and its parents.

Animals are essential to pharmaceutical research, Dr. Bedford said. "You can model all you want - learn the atomic weight of a substance, draw it on paper and theorize what it supposed to do - but to determine what a drug does to a biological system, you have to put it into that biological system."

Dr. Bedford said the animal used for testing depends on specific research. To develop the Sabin oral polio vaccine, for example, scientists had to use the rhesus, the rhesus monkey, a government regulations forbid testing on people, and the rhesus was the organism that could most accurately simulate how the drug would react in the human body.

Some people argue that animal testing is cruel, but polio is a cruel disease. Dr. Bedford said, "Because of the rhesus tests, the vaccine was approved, and now polio is a virtually unheard of disease. I don't know if any scientist who works with animals that doesn't respect them. All in all, we're working to benefit mankind."

When conducting animal research, Dr. Bedford said, scientists fit the organism to the problem.

"Actually we start with mosquitoes for the sake of economy," he said. "A mosquito costs 50 cents and a rhesus costs from $200-$1,000 apiece. You don't use a monkey when a mouse will do."

Snakes, apes, fish and even roaches have been used in one type of experiment or another, he explained. Some species, however, lend themselves to certain types of tests: research designed to cure glaucoma is being conducted now at Ole Miss on rabbits because of their unique optical system; the monkey's behavior when injected with amphetamine has shed light on the drug's effect on people in social settings; and scientists elsewhere have observed the owl's

HANCOCK BANK ANNOUNCES THE TAX-CUT OF A LIFETIME.

By now you've probably heard all the hoopla about Individual Retirement Accounts. But you may not realize that an IRA is a tax-break that will last you a lifetime.

Cut your taxes two ways. IRAs have been around for a while now, but effective January 1st, sweeping new changes are enacted that make them more attractive than ever.

With the new rules, now anyone with earned income can open an IRA, whether already covered by a pension plan or not. And the annual maximums you can contribute to an IRA have changed, too. Beginning in January, individuals can contribute up to $2,000 (up to $2,250 for yourself and non-working spouse). And if both of you work, the ceiling goes up to $4,000.

Here's the best part. The full amount you contribute each year to your IRA is tax deductible. And all the money in your IRA, including interest, is tax-deferred until you begin withdrawing it, when you'll likely be in a lower tax bracket.

Tax-deferred savings grow faster

The money that stays in your IRA account that would have gone to taxes makes a dramatic difference in how your nest egg grows. For example, if you deposited $2,000 every year for the next 30 years, that $60,000 will balloon to over $380,000 based on a modest 10% annual compounded return.

Get the facts.

To find out how to get in on this monumental tax break, stop by any Hancock Bank office. We'll show you how to cut your taxes for the rest of your life, with the tax-cut of a lifetime.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal of IRA funds, and the IRS imposes a 10% penalty on amount withdrawn and amount must be included in taxable income.

HIGH INTEREST RATES MEAN LOWER SELLING PRICES

QUESTION: I recently read where currently, house prices are low due to high interest rates. Does that mean that if interest rates drop, prices will increase, and if so, why? E. T., Columbus

ANSWER: Dear E. T.

When you read where the average price home is $60,000 or more in many parts of the country, it is hard to think in terms of low house prices. In fact, many people are asking, "if this is low, what's high?" However, in terms of how homes have historically gone up in value year after year, in recent months prices have not increased and in some instances have actually decreased in value.

A major cause of this slow increase in value can be directly attributed to high interest rates and what those high rates do to the demand for housing. As you know, almost all homes are financed and as interest rates increase, the monthly payments necessary to repay the mortgage also increase. Thus, if you lowered your asking price by $7,000, the monthly mortgage payment for a borrower would decrease more than $100.

The reasoning used to explain how high interest rates cause home prices to drop can also explain how a lowering of rates should cause an increase in house prices. Recently, high interest rates have resulted in fewer and fewer people being in the market for homes. If and when interest rates start dropping, these people are going to be in the market. However, because of high interest rates fewer and fewer new homes are being built. In fact, total new home construction in 1981 will be less than it has been in many years. With fewer new homes being built, the asking price of existing homes on the market will probably go up due to the fact that there will be more people wanting to buy and they will be able to borrow money at lower rates of interest. Thus, people selling their homes will ask more for them than they are asking now. All of this, of course, assumes that interest rates will come down. Let's hope they do.

You're being ripped off

for more than $20 each year.

By Shoplifters.

Last year shoplifters stole between $4 and $5 billion worth of merchandise. That's like stealing over $20 from each American. Shoplifting costs stores, and you, more than merchandise. Prices go up to cover the losses incurred by shoplifters. Dollar spent for special security devices, extra guards, insurance, alarm systems and legal counsels are eventually absorbed by you, the consumer. Stores that do stop shoplifters do it with the help of law officers who lost countless hours in monitoring, catching shoplifters. And you, the taxpayer, footed the bill for protecting shoplifters through an already overburdened criminal justice system. How can you help stop shoplifters? By being concerned. And informed. By urging your local authorities to crack down on shoplifters. And by reporting any shoplifting activity when you see it.
